EISENHOWER AT CROSSROADS

General Eisenhower faces a tough decision. A week has witnessed the complete reversing of the political picture. The Taft victories in Wisconsin and Nebraska have not only put the Senator back in the race, but given him a tremendous impetus.

One week ago it looked as though the General might be about to win largely by default. If his proxies in Wisconsin—Stassen and Warren—had been able to cut Taft down, and if his Nebraska friends had done as well with the write-in business as happened in Minnesota, Taft probably would have been forced to withdraw.

But it didn't work out that way. Senator Taft demonstrated the effectiveness of courage, adroit leadership, and organizational efforts. He came from behind, and swept far into the lead.

Measured by delegates, the race now is terrifically one-sided. According to Associated Press figures, Taft has 102 delegates. This is more than twice as many as those pledged to Eisenhower, and considerably more than the total of all the Eisenhower, Warren and Stassen votes put together. It is 51 per cent of the total thus far selected.

On Tuesday comes the important Illinois election, with fifty delegates at stake, and the experts give this to Taft by a landslide. They predict Taft will win another forty-five delegates here, at a minimum.

Meanwhile a number of other states are getting ready for conventions, and in a great many of these, especially those south of the Mason-Dixon line, Taft has the inside track.

The importance of all this is two-fold. So far as public sentiment is concerned, nothing succeeds like success. They like a winner. From here out, Taft's victories are likely to snowball.

This comment is not as superficial as it may sound on first inspection. The fact is that the public is touchy on being told what it will or will not do. It wants to be courted. "Taft can't win" has been political dynamite from the first time it was used, and may have boomeranged by now.

Taft has done what the Eisenhower campaigners have not done—asked the voters face to face to support him. Moreover, he now has the sentimental appeal of having come from behind. Ever hear the fight fans cheer a man who gets up off the floor and tears into the boxer who knocked him down? The same emotional background is involved in the political battle.

The fact, therefore, that Taft has a string of almost sure-fire victories coming up for the next two or three weeks is a powerfully important matter in building up public support. The stage is set for this. For months a great many Eisenhower supporters have been campaigning on the general assertion, "Of course it is true that Taft is the best qualified man around to be president, but you can't get him elected." Just get the voters steamed up, and they'll show how to elect him!

But the impact on key political figures is tremendous in a different way.

In a great many parts of the nation, due to a variety of reasons, the political leaders are desperately anxious to be on the winning side, and have a very "practical" attitude towards any political ideology which may be involved.

Senator Lodge, for example, has written learnedly on the supreme importance of being on the winning team. He did this as a

OPINION ON APPEAL FROM FISHING LAWS

Judge Keller Rules in Case of Woman Arrested for Violation

DISMISSES THE APPEAL

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 5—An important and interesting opinion was handed down yesterday by President Judge Hiram H. Keller, in the Court of Quarter Sessions. It dealt with a summary conviction involving Mrs. Helen Louise Cooper, former New Hope hotel owner, who was arrested for a violation of the State fishing laws.

After reviewing the case at length, Judge Keller declared the defendant technically guilty of the offense and dismissed the appeal, placing the costs on Mrs. Cooper.

Under the law providing for closed seasons, all fishing was prohibited between March 14 and April 15, "except in rivers, ponds and lakes, not stocked with trout and in streams emptying into Lake Erie within the confines of Pennsylvania, from the mouth of the stream in a Southerly direction to State Highway Route No. 5, a distance of approximately one-half mile."

Portions of Judge Keller's opinion follows:

"For the purpose of state law, a person shall be deemed to be fishing if he shall have in his possession any fishing line, rod or other device which can be used for fishing while on or in any water or on the banks of any water where fishing is prohibited."

"Phenom" Smith Dies; Was Ill Several Weeks

A former resident of Bristol and one who achieved quite a reputation as a basketball promoter and discoverer of baseball players, died in Manchester, N. H., Thursday.

The man who discovered baseball's immortal Christy Mathewson, and who pitched two no-hit, no-run games in big-time competition, is dead at 87.

John F. "Phenom" Smith died after an illness of several weeks.

Manchester's "grand old man of baseball," was one of the few survivors of the gloveless days of the sport.

Smith pitched his first no-hit, no-run game against Baltimore in 1885 while playing for Newark. While hurling for the San Francisco Chronicle team a year later, Smith pitched a second hitless game against the Pioneers.

Smith also managed Bristol's champion basketball teams a number of years ago.

Today's Quiet Moment

By Dr. John E. Mertz,
pastor Newtown Presbyterian Church

The Psalmist in the 104th Psalm felt that God, who covers Himself with light, as well as having other wondrous attributes, deserves the worship of His children. This light is the token of a new day for humanity, with a Kingdom based on justice and righteousness. This light in Christ dispels darkness as we look into the future. This light directs our pathway through Christ's perfect example. This light brings healing through forgiveness of sin and growth in the Christian life. This light provides the quickening energy necessary to replace sinful desires with good motives. And since these things are true, the poet cried out, "Bless the Lord, O my soul. Praise ye the Lord." How many of us will join also with the writer as he says, "I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live. I will sing praise to my God, while I have my being." How long has it been since you last worshipped in your church? When have you sat alone and found that your "meditation of Him was sweet." Let us in this Lenten season renew our habits of public and private devotion.

The Cynical Attitude of Youth

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

THE pall of fear of a world war that has been hanging over us seems to be felt most keenly by our teen-age youths. The boys see that their being called sooner or later into the armed forces is inevitable. They feel unsure about their future educationally, vocationally. A few have grown very cynical, taking the attitude, what's the use of keeping striving at books or on a job? What's the use to exercise self-discipline in preparation for marriage and parenthood?

Following a forum the other evening with parents, a mother told me her daughter shocked her by saying, "Why should the boys and why should we girls bother about all these things you parents want us to be concerned about, when in a few years all of us may be destroyed by bombs? Why not have all the pleasures we can and not bother about the future?" As the mother went on, she said she was apprehensive of the moral implications of her daughter's questions.

Reason for Cynicism

It's easy to see how some of these youths have grown so cynical. Many adults have been cynical and the news we hear or read is not always reassuring. Yet if my observations are correct, the crest of hopelessness and cynicism throughout our land has passed, even as one senses the general tone of the air and press. The more recent happenings in the UN and developments of defense and cooperation among the peace-loving nations of the world seem to presage a more hopeful outlook.

Boys facing the draft soon or within several more years, and their parents, seem to feel and act far less panicky than they did a year or more ago. More seem to be inclined "to take it in their stride." Rotation of service in Korea and the return to civilian life by men who have completed their terms of service, appear to be having some good effect.

More and more of our youths are availing themselves of the opportunities while in the service to continue their education, some finishing high school or college there, some others pursuing fine technical courses not available back home.

To Continue Preparation

Thanks to wise parents, teachers and neighbors, many youths on entering the armed forces are planning now to continue their educational and vocational preparation on returning home, believing the chances of their return to be pretty high.

Of course, anything can happen. Yet most youths can hope with considerable reason that the way ahead is not nearly so dark as that daughter suggested to her anxious mother.

Anyway, there are so many parents and teachers and other adults who have faith in the ultimate purposes of God and his children, and are so esteemed by these youths as to be able to inspire them with hope and will to resolve to press on toward goals of achievement in self-discipline. Even if the worst imaginable should happen, these struggles would have brought abiding satisfactions in the meanwhile. Let us parents pray harder and work harder toward these ends.

BENSALEM OPENS SEASON WITH WIN OVER OLD RIVALS

WILLOW GROVE, Apr. 5 — Bensalem Township high opened its 1952 baseball season with a close 6-5 victory over Upper Moreland High, here, yesterday. Five runs in the fifth inning did the trick for the Owls.

Upper Moreland was leading 4-1 going into the top half of the fifth when Carl Arnold walked. Bincidino was the second out. When Robinson and Struble walked, the bags were loaded. Crowthers was hit with a pitched ball to force Arnold with a run. Bob Whitfield then crashed out a triple to clear the bases. Al Parker's double scored Whitfield with what proved to be the winning run.

Whitfield fanned eight batters in the three innings he pitched. Ron Elliot had four strikeouts. Whitfield made two of Bensalem's five hits. Upper Moreland had six hits.

BUREAU CLOSED

TOKYO — (INS) — A 51-year-old head of a "Marriage Bureau" in Osaka is in trouble with the police on a charge of procuring concubines for business executives. The "rapid" advertised in reputable journals for "secretaries with good looks and nice figures." According to the Nippon Times, most of the 170 young ladies who replied, soon found that a typewriter or shorthand wasn't necessary for their job.

HOUSE HEATING

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — (INS) — One of the newest ideas in house heating was recently described at the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers meeting in St. Louis. University of Illinois engineers told the Society basement-less homes having a loop of warm air heating ducts embedded in the concrete slab floor can be more comfortable if feeder ducts go to intermediate points along the walls.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1952,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 5.

A retired major general of the U. S. Army, whose name I'll be happy to furnish any committee of Congress interested in saving money, has just supplied me with an up-to-date account of how Americans in Germany are enduring the "extreme hardship conditions" there.

Back in June, I told you of a letter noting the hazardous conditions under which a State Department employee was living. He had a rent-free house with servants, a maid, butler, gardener, chauffeur, free laundry and cleaning service, free telephone and lots of time for weekend trips to resorts. In addition the State Department paid him a ten percent "extreme hardship" bonus. When I visited Germany myself in August, I found all this to be true.

This general with the new information has a long record of faithful service in the U. S. Armed Forces and knows whereof he speaks. He goes into the generosity of our taxpayers as it pertains to the subsidization of military personnel in Germany insofar as their daily needs are concerned.

"The cost of living in the United States has hit an all time high," he writes. "The married man with a couple of children is trying desperately to stretch his paycheck over the inflated grocery bill while he is also paying more taxes in order to make up the overhead to provide post exchange and commissary privileges for thousands of unauthorized persons in Germany, including newspapermen."

Then he tells about service personnel in Germany. It takes interesting reading, particularly for civilian housewives here who have to pay the food bills. For instance, in Germany Americans can purchase butter for 46 cents a pound; flour, five cents; sugar, eight cents; coffee, 75 cents; porterhouse steak, 68 cents; Swift's premium turkey, 54 cents a pound; cigarettes, 10 cents a pack.

Haircuts are 35 cents and the man of the house can get a barber-shop shave for 20 cents. Mama's shampoo, hair set and manicure is $1.40.

Gasoline for Americans on official assignment is 16 cents a gallon and automobile tags are $1.10. The general adds, however, that "Americans can travel on German trains with special luxury cars for one-sixth the price that is charged Germans, and use a special taxicab at special low rates. They can go to famed Bavarian Alps resorts and pay for rooms not to exceed $1.00 a day with meals at $1.50."

One of the purposes of occupying Germany is to wean the Germans away from Nazism and Communism and teach them a little democracy. Here is the way the general says we are doing it:

"There are requisitioned swimming pools for Americans only, special fine clubs with German servants in magnificent requisitioned mansions and bars and dining rooms operated in a grand manner with food and drink purchased at the rock bottom commissary and post exchange prices."

The general accuses the army of breaking the law and circumventing the will of Congress in providing the hordes of State Department officials and other civilians in Germany with a cut rate living. He says that in addition to "paying out billions to bring the standard of living of all European nations up to that of the United States, and rearming many nations that don't, in their hearts, want to rearm except as an incidental to getting more money, the U. S. taxpayer has been subsidizing thousands of employees of corporations and other unauthorized civilians, who, according to the intent of the basic law of Congress and Army regulations, are not entitled to these privileges."

The cut rate living is provided for soldiers, sailors and marines overseas. But their needs are forgotten in the rush of civilians intent on a bargain basement living while drawing "hazardous duty" bonuses in addition to their adequate salaries.

Under the law the Army is authorized to open post exchanges and commissaries to civilians in "remote places." Germany is considered remote. The general says the Defense Department is abusing this definition. President Truman has just asked Congress to renew the "war law" that provides for this largesse to our remote citizens living luxuriously in Germany.

Anyone in Germany who is fast on his feet in international currency exchange also can supplement his salary with adroit dealings in Deutsch marks. One way is to buy up antiques and ship them without cost to the U. S. for resale. Another is to stock up on coffee, nylons, tea, sugar, candy and cigarettes and then unload the surplus to the Germans at fancy prices. The general says he's willing right now to tell any interested committee of Congress just who is doing it.

this appeal are not in dispute. On April 7, 1951, while the defendant was fishing in a small pool of water formed in the Delaware River Canal basin, immediately in front of her home and business establishment known as the "River House" near New Hope, Pennsylvania, she was hailed by a person whom she did not know, who called from his automobile and told her to stop fishing. "Not knowing the identity of the person in the automobile, who it developed was a Fish Warden, she asked him what she was doing that was wrong, that she had a license and requested him to come over and tell her. The Warden accordingly went to the defendant's premises, asked to see her license and, instead of explaining and informing the defendant of her alleged violation as requested, he took her name and number without more, left her premises.

"About ten days later, the defendant received a notice to appear for a hearing before a justice of the peace at Edison, Pennsylvania, approximately twelve miles distant from the defendant's residence, before whom the Warden had lodged an information, charging the defendant with having maliciously and unlawfully violated the rules and regulations of the Pennsylvania Fish Commission by fishing during a closed period in the Delaware Canal.

"A hearing was subsequently held on April 20, 1951, after which the justice adjudged the defendant guilty of fishing in closed water during the closed period after March 14th and before April 15, 1951, in water other than a river, a lake or pond, as described by the Pennsylvania Fish Laws, and imposed a fine upon the defendant of $20.00 and costs of $5.50, to which judgment the defendant took this appeal.

What is a canal? "A 'canal' in the ordinary acceptance of the term, is an artificial channel or trench constructed for the purpose of conveying water, usually for the purpose of transportation or navigation. The term 'canal' is unlike the terms 'river,' 'pond,' 'lake,' and other words used to designate natural bodies of water, the ordinary meaning of which is confined to the water itself, in that it includes also the banks and has reference rather to the excavation or channel as a receptacle for the water. A canal has also been defined to be a navigable public highway of a peculiar kind.

"The canal in question, known as the Delaware River Canal, was originally created and constructed as an artificial channel for the purpose of transportation or navigation and was formerly owned and operated by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, principally for the transportation of coal and other products from the mining regions, along the Delaware River.

"It is no longer used as such and is presently owned and maintained by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This canal may properly be regarded as an artificial arm or channel of the Delaware River because it receives substantially all of its water from said river at or near Easton and by means of various intakes from the river, at divers other places along its course, and discharges the same again into the Delaware River at or near Bristol.

"Although the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder are very broad and inclusive, they are, nevertheless, somewhat ambiguous in their application. In the absence of any other sources of water supply we would be strongly inclined to hold that this particular canal did not come within the classification of an inland stream as contemplated by the Act and regulations aforesaid. On the contrary, we would regard it as an arm of the Delaware River which, admittedly, is excluded from the provisions of this act. There was no evidence whatsoever of any water, other than that entering from the Delaware River, being in this canal.

"However, inasmuch as we are familiar with this canal for its entire distance, we cannot refrain from taking judicial notice of the fact that along its course a number of small brooks or streams empty therein at various points and, for that reason alone, we must construe it to be such an inland water as comes within the purview of the Act and regulations and, therefore, must declare the defendant to have been technically guilty of the offense with which she was charged.

"Notwithstanding this conclusion and decision, we hold no brief for the manner of enforcement pursued in this case. For several years there has been no water in the canal basin to the North of the defendants' property for a distance of approximately ten miles. South of the defendant's property, the canal has been partially filled with water, receiving the same by means of a feeder or intake from the Delaware River, the water of which enters the feeder at a point several hundred yards North of the 'River House' and flowing in a Southerly direction enters the canal basin immediately South of the 'River House'.

"Some of this intake water finds its way toward the North and forms a pool in front of the 'River House'. It was in this pool where the defendant was fishing at the time she was hailed by the Fish Warden and told to stop. Since the water forming this pool came from the Delaware River, making it possible to fish, it can readily be understood why the defendant was unaware she was violating any fishing law or regulations.

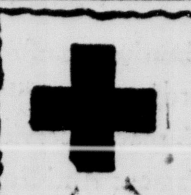

"This is supported by the fact that she asked the Fish warden what she was doing that was wrong. The defendant is an eminently respectable person. She asked a civil question and was entitled to be extended ordinary courtesy by the public official in the form of a civil answer, which she did not receive.

"While ignorance of the law or regulations established by the Fish Commission may be no excuse, nevertheless, we feel it was incumbent upon the Warden, a public servant, in the exercise of ordinary courtesy to have informed the defendant of the offense with which she was alleged to have violated, instead of merely taking her name and number and then, abruptly, leave the premises and lodge an information before a justice of the peace residing about fifteen miles distant, notwithstanding there are a number of competent available justices in the immediate vicinity where the defendant resided.

"We are fully aware that in the absence of statutory regulations, a justice of the peace has criminal jurisdiction throughout the county. "Nevertheless, it seems to us to indicate an abuse of process when a Warden institutes a prosecution before a distant justice or magistrate rather than before a justice in the vicinity in which the offense occurred, as was done in the instant case.

"It often creates an unnecessary inconvenience and hardship on the defendant and gives rise to suspicion as to the reason therefor. It is this kind of enforcement of which our citizens very properly disapprove.

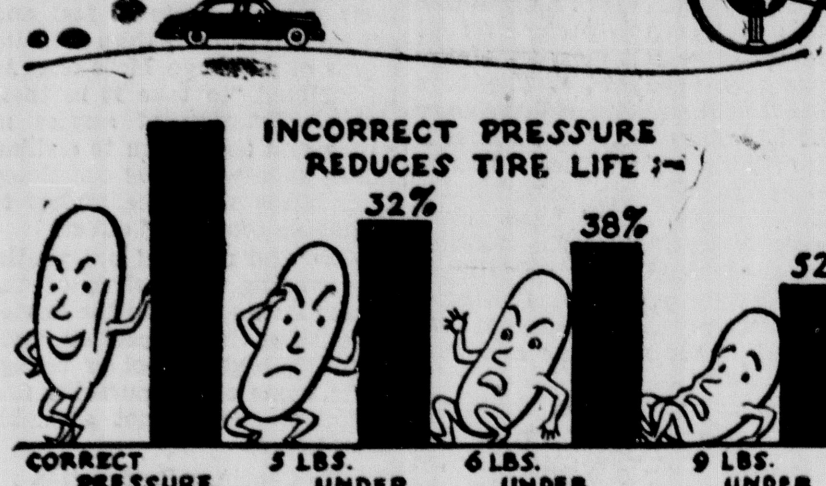

"In this case a little courtesy on the part of the Warden might have avoided this prosecution, which we regard as having been unnecessary, under the peculiar controversial circumstances."

Sportsmanlike DRIVING

TAKE CARE OF TIRES

Take care of your tires! Motorists who fail to look after the "rubber shoes" of their cars head straight down a path to trouble, says the AAA driver training book, "Sportsmanlike Driving."

Under-inflation is the worst tire fault. Under-inflated tires wear out fast, make steering hard and braking uneven. Over-inflation also is a bad fault. Blow-outs are more likely. The middle of the tread gets extra wear. The tire loses road grip. Chances of skidding are greater.

Worn tires are trouble-brewers. Sharp objects in the road easily pierce them. Punctures or blowouts constantly threaten.

Dangers of accident multiply. Suddenly "flats" put the driver on the spot.

Follow seven simple rules for tire care:

1. Drive at reasonable speeds.
2. Keep correct tire pressure.
3. Even up inflation when tires are cold.
4. Never drive on a flat.
5. Avoid striking curbs, holes, or rocks.
6. Avoid jumping starts or screeching stops.
7. Keep brakes adjusted and wheels in line.

Healthy tires help YOU wear a smile!

sales talk for General Eisenhower. It starts to backfire the moment someone else—in this case, Taft—emerges as being possibly even easier to elect than Eisenhower.

The fact is that one state after another has the bandwagon itch, and the instant it looks like a real boom has started, there is likely to be such a stampede as hasn't been seen in years.

The Eisenhower followers know this as well as anyone. They tried to start a stampede on the strength of New Hampshire and Minnesota. It wasn't enough. Now they are somewhat in the unhappy position of a prizefighter who puts his whole fight into a tremendous right-hand lead, and misses. They are off balance, out of position.

As of now, it is clear that General Eisenhower no longer has a chance for what is called a "cheap" victory. To win at all, he will have to work for it and fight for it. He can no longer sit on the sidelines and let others carry the fight.

Moreover, part of the gloss has been knocked off. The magic of his name, so impressive immediately after Minnesota, no longer creates a spell since Nebraska.

There was a time when General Eisenhower may have been convinced, upon the testimony of his friends, that he could win hands down if he entered the race personally. There was a time also when he and his supporters doubtless believed they were about to win by default, without the General ever having to return to this country.

Now the situation is that they know the General can't win without getting back here and taking up the cudgels personally; and they can't be sure he will win even then.

Naturally, there is little attractive about the idea of surrendering the headship of NATO and coming back here to campaign unsuccessfully against a man who may well become the next President.

The General's thoughts, in this dilemma, are going to be long, long thoughts, and much will hinge on what decision he reaches.

EISENHOWER AT CROSSROADS

General Eisenhower faces a tough decision. A week has witnessed the complete reversing of the political picture. The Taft victories in Wisconsin and Nebraska have not only put the Senator back in the race, but given him a tremendous impetus.

One week ago it looked as though the General might be about to win largely by default. If his proxies in Wisconsin—Stassen and Warren—had been able to cut Taft down, and if his Nebraska friends had done as well with the write-in business as happened in Minnesota, Taft probably would have been forced to withdraw.

But it didn't work out that way. Senator Taft demonstrated the effectiveness of courage, adroit leadership, and organizational efforts. He came from behind, and swept far into the lead.

Measured by delegates, the race now is terrifically one-sided. According to Associated Press figures, Taft has 102 delegates. This is more than twice as many as those pledged to Eisenhower, and considerably more than the total of all the Eisenhower, Warren and Stassen votes put together. It is 51 per cent of the total thus far selected.

On Tuesday comes the important Illinois election, with fifty delegates at stake, and the experts give this to Taft by a landslide. They predict Taft will win another forty-five delegates here, at a minimum.

Meanwhile a number of other states are getting ready for conventions, and in a great many of these, especially those south of the Mason-Dixon line, Taft has the inside track.

The importance of all this is two-fold.

So far as public sentiment is concerned, nothing succeeds like success. They like a winner. From here out, Taft's victories are likely to snowball.

This comment is not as superficial as it may sound on first inspection. The fact is that the public is touchy on being told what it will or will not do. It wants to be courted. "Taft can't win" has been political dynamite from the first time it was used, and may have boomeranged by now.

Taft has done what the Eisenhower campaigners have not done—asked the voters face to face to support him. Moreover, he now has the sentimental appeal of having come from behind. Ever hear the fight fans cheer a man who gets up off the floor and tears into the boxer who knocked him down? The same emotional background is involved in the political battle.

The fact, therefore, that Taft has a string of almost sure-fire victories coming up for the next two or three weeks is a powerfully important matter in building up public support. The stage is set for this. For months a great many Eisenhower supporters have been campaigning on the general assertion, "Of course it is true that Taft is the best qualified man around to be president, but you can't get him elected." Just get the voters steamed up, and they'll show how to elect him!

But the impact on key political figures is tremendous in a different way.

In a great many parts of the nation, due to a variety of reasons, the political leaders are desperately anxious to be on the winning side, and have a very "practical" attitude towards any political ideology which may be involved.

Senator Lodge, for example, has written learnedly on the supreme importance of being on the winning team. He did this as a

OPINION ON APPEAL FROM FISHING LAWS

Judge Keller Rules in Case of Woman Arrested for Violation

DISMISSES THE APPEAL

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 5—An important and interesting opinion was handed down yesterday by President Judge Hiram H. Keller, in the Court of Quarter Sessions. It dealt with a summary conviction involving Mrs. Helen Louise Cooper, former New Hope hotel owner, who was arrested for a violation of the State fishing laws.

After reviewing the case at length, Judge Keller declared the defendant technically guilty of the offense and dismissed the appeal, placing the costs on Mrs. Cooper.

Under the law providing for closed seasons, all fishing was prohibited between March 14 and April 15, "except in rivers, ponds and lakes, not stocked with trout and in streams emptying into Lake Erie within the confines of Pennsylvania, from the mouth of the stream in a southerly direction to State Highway Route No. 5, a distance of approximately one-half mile."

Portions of Judge Keller's opinion follows:

"For the purpose of state law, a person shall be deemed to be fishing if he shall have in his possession any fishing line, rod or other device which can be used for fishing while on or in any water or on the banks of any water where fishing is prohibited."

"The essential facts involved in 'Phenom' Smith Dies; Was Ill Several Weeks

A former resident of Bristol and one who achieved quite a reputation as a basketball promoter and discoverer of baseball players, died in Manchester, N. H., Thursday.

The man who discovered baseball's immortal Christy Mathewson, and who pitched two no-hit, no-run games in big-time competition, is dead at 87.

John F. "Phenom" Smith died after an illness of several weeks. Manchester's "grand old man of baseball" was one of the few survivors of the gloveless days of the sport.

Smith pitched his first no-hit, no-run game against Baltimore in 1885 while playing for Newark. While hurling for the San Francisco Chronicle team a year later, Smith pitched a second hitless game against the Pioneers.

Smith also managed Bristol's champion basketball teams a number of years ago.

The libellants come from Tullytown, Hatboro, RD, and New Hope, and an auto damage suit in which the plaintiff and defendant are both from Sellersville, RD, have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas here.

The minor plaintiff and complainant are seeking $267.89 damages, growing out of a collision Nov. 30, 1951, when the plaintiff was driving south on Route 309, north of Quakertown.

Raymond C. Scheetz, Hotel Norton, Detroit, Michigan, has been named the defendant in a divorce action by his wife, Una Mae Scheetz, of New Hope. They were married April 3, 1926, in New Hope, and separated Sept. 5, 1944.

Nancy D. Kyle, County Line road, Hatboro, RD, in an action in divorce, is suing her husband, Harry J. Kyle, Willow Grove. They were wedded Nov. 25, 1948, in Hatboro.

Wolodymyr Tutka, also known as Walter Tutka, Tullytown, is suing his wife, Albina Angelina Tutka, Trenton, N. J., for a divorce. They were married Nov. 13, 1949, in Trenton, N. J., and the date of separation was not mentioned in the libel filed in the office of Prothonotary Joseph A. Keating.

The board also tentatively set up its budget at $285,000 for 1952-53 and kept the $5 per capita tax, the same as last year.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

President Truman, in an address marking the third anniversary of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, emphasized that the NATO countries wished to prevent another world war, not to fight one, and were "steadily increasing our chances" of attaining that objective.

Queen Juliana presented to Mr. Truman a carillon as a gift of the people of the Netherlands. She said the bells were a symbol of the small nations whose cause she had traveled to Washington to support.

Secretary of State Acheson, in his first official mission to Latin America, will visit Brazil next month to assure this nation's sister republics that there is no abatement in its interest in the Good Neighbor Policy despite current preoccupation with European and Asiatic problems.

In the Korean truce negotiations there were some signs that there might be a new move to break the long-standing stalemate over major issues that have blocked the achievement of an armistice.

The British Labor party, by winning nearly three out of every four seats, strengthened its control of the London County Council. Labor has won ninety-two seats, against thirty-seven for the Conservatives. In the former council Labor held sixty-three seats and the Conservatives sixty-two.

French Premier Pinay was persuaded to give up his intention to resign when the Assembly passed an amendment that would have crippled his financial program to uphold the franc.

The United States delegation to the United Nations received instructions from Washington to abstain from voting in favor of the motion by eleven Asian and Arab countries calling on the Security Council for debate on their complaint against French actions in Tunisia.

Judge James P. McGranery, named Thursday by President Truman as his new Attorney General to succeed J. Howard McGrath, conferred with President Truman and later indicated that plans calling for a special investigation of Government corruption had been dropped. He said he would make his own inquiry and if he found any wrongdoing he would ask the Federal Bureau of Investigation to look into the matter.

State Department funds for the coming fiscal year were tentatively slashed by nearly 33 per cent in the House, which also voted to withhold appropriations for a United States diplomatic mission to the Vatican.

Today's Quiet Moment

By Dr. John E. Mertz,
pastor Newtown Presbyterian Church

The Psalmist in the 104th Psalm felt that God, Who covered Himself with light, as well as having other wondrous attributes, deserves the worship of His children. This light is the token of a new day for humanity, with a Kingdom based on justice and righteousness. This light in Christ dispels darkness as we look into the future. This light directs our pathway through Christ's perfect example. This light brings healing through forgiveness of sin and growth in the Christian life. This light provides the quickening energy necessary to replace sinful desires with good motives. And since these things are true, the poet cried out, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, Praise ye the Lord." How many of us will join along with the writer as he says, "I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live. I will sing praise to my God, while I have my being." How long has it been since you last worshipped in your church? When have you sat alone and found that your "meditation of Him was sweet." Let us in this Lenten season renew our habits of public and private devotion.

The Cynical Attitude of Youth

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

THE pall of fear of a world war that has been hanging over us seems to be felt most keenly by our teen-age youths. The boys see that their being called sooner or later into the armed forces is inevitable. They feel unsure about their future educationally, vocationally. A few have grown very cynical, taking the attitude, what's the use of keep striving at books or on a job? What's the use to exercise self-discipline in preparation for marriage and parenthood?

Following a forum the other evening with parents, a mother told me her daughter shocked her by saying, "Why should the boys and why should we girls bother about all these things you parents want us to be concerned about, when in a few years all of us may be destroyed by bombs? Why not have all the pleasures we can and not bother about the future?" As the mother went on, she said she was apprehensive of the moral implications of her daughter's questions.

Reason for Cynicism

It's easy to see how some of these youths have grown so cynical. Many adults have been cynical and the news we hear or read is not always reassuring. Yet if my observations are correct, the crest of hopelessness and cynicism throughout our land has passed, even as one senses the general tone of the air and press. The more recent happenings in the UN and developments of defense and cooperation among the peace-loving nations of the world seem to presage a more hopeful outlook.

Boys facing the draft soon or within several more years, and their parents, seem to feel and act far less panicky than they did a year or more ago. More seem to be inclined "to take it in their stride." Rotation of service in Korea and the return to civilian life by men who have completed their terms of service, appear to be having some good effect.

More and more of our youths are availing themselves of the opportunities while in the service to continue their education, some finishing high school or college there, some others pursuing fine technical courses not available back home.

To Continue Preparation
Thanks to wise parents, teachers and neighbors, many youths on entering the armed forces are planning now to continue their educational and vocational preparation on returning home, believing the chances of their return to be pretty high.

Of course, anything can happen. Yet most youths can hope with considerable reason that the way ahead is not nearly so dark as that daughter suggested to her anxious mother.

Anyway, there are so many parents and teachers and other adults who have faith in the ultimate purposes of God and his children, and are so esteemed by these youths as to be able to inspire them with hope and with resolve to press on toward goals of achievement in self-discipline. Even if the worst imaginable should happen, these struggles would have brought abiding satisfactions in the meanwhile. Let us parents pray harder and work harder toward these ends.

censes and to keep their dogs on their respective properties and in every way protect them from contact with strays or wild life.

"The Board intends from time to time to inform the public of the actions taken for their protection. At this time the Board has arranged with the University of Pennsylvania to send into the township a vaccinating team from the Veterinary School for the purpose of vaccinating against rabies all dogs in the Township. Starting Saturday, April 12th and for two additional afternoons on each succeeding Saturdays they will vaccinate any resident's dog at the Edgely Fire House, the Bucks County Rescue Squad and the Newportville Fire House. The hours and other details will be announced at a later date.

"The Board will request the payment of one dollar to cover the cost of the supplies. The Veterinary team has offered their services free for the benefit of the Public Health. Any resident of the Township who would like to offer their services to assist in this program may do so by contacting the Secretary of the Board, Dr. Samuel Katz."

Mrs. Whipp states that her father was in the habit of spending each week-end at her home, usually coming from Philadelphia by bus. Mrs. Whipp was unaware of the accident until a few hours later, the police contacting a sister of Mr. Kirschemann, in Philadelphia, whose name was found on his person. Mr. Kirschemann is employed as a foreman at the Allegheny Dye Works, Philadelphia.

BENSALEM OPENS SEASON WITH WIN OVER OLD RIVALS

WILLOW GROVE, Apr. 5 — Bensalem Township high opened its 1952 baseball season with a close 6-5 victory over Upper Moreland High, here, yesterday. Five runs in the fifth inning did the trick for the Owls.

Upper Moreland was leading 4-1 going into the top half of the fifth when Carl Arnold walked. Bincidino was the second out. When Robinson and Struble walked, the bags were loaded. Crowthers was hit with a pitched ball to force Arnold with a run. Bob Whitfield then crashed out a triple to clear the bases. Al Parker's double scored Whitfield with what proved to be the winning run.

Whitfield fanned eight batters in the three innings he pitched. Ron Elliot had four strikeouts. Whitfield made two of Bensalem's five hits. Upper Moreland had six hits.

TOKYO — (INS) — A 51-year-old head of a "Marriage Bureau" in Osaka is in trouble with the police on a charge of procuring concubines for business executives. The "cupid" advertised in reputable journals for "secretaries with good looks and nice figures." According to the Nippon Times, most of the 170 young ladies who replied, soon found that a typewriter or shorthand wasn't necessary for their job.

HOUSE HEATING

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — (INS) — One of the newest ideas in house heating was recently described at the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers meeting in St. Louis. University of Illinois engineers told the Society basement-less homes having a loop of warm air heating ducts embedded in the concrete slab floor can be more comfortable if feeder ducts go to corners of the house instead of to intermediate points along the walls.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1952,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 5. A retired major general of the U. S. Army, whose name I'll be happy to furnish any committee of Congress interested in saving money, has just supplied me with an up-to-date account of how Americans in Germany are enduring the "extreme hardship conditions" there.

Back in June, I told you of a letter noting the hazardous conditions under which a State Department employee was living. He had a rent-free house with servants, a maid, butler, gardener, chauffeur, free laundry and cleaning service, free telephone and lots of time for weekend trips to resorts. In addition the State Department paid him a ten percent "extreme hardship" bonus. When I visited Germany myself in August, I found all this to be true.

This general with the new information has a long record of faithful service in the U. S. Armed Forces and knows whereof he speaks. He goes into the generosity of us taxpayers as it pertains to the subsidization of military personnel in Germany insofar as their daily needs are concerned.

"The cost of living in the United States has hit an all time high," he writes. "The married man with a couple of children is trying desperately to stretch his paycheck over the inflated grocery bill while he is also paying more taxes in order to make up the overhead to provide post exchange and commissary privileges for thousands of unauthorized persons in Germany, including newspapermen."

Then he tells about service personnel in Germany. It makes interesting reading, particularly for civilian housewives here who have to pay the food bills. For instance, in Germany Americans can purchase butter for 46 cents a pound; flour, five cents; sugar, eight cents; coffee, 75 cents; porterhouse steak, 66 cents; Swift's premium turkey, 54 cents a pound; cigarettes, 10 cents a pack.

Haircuts are 35 cents and the man of the house can get a barber-shop shave for 20 cents. Mama's shampoo, hair set and manicure is $1.40.

Gasoline for Americans on official assignment is 16 cents a gallon and automobile tags are $1.10. The general adds, however, that "Americans can travel on German trains with special luxury cars for other than a river, a lake or pond, as described by the Pennsylvania Fish Laws," and imposed a fine upon the defendant of $20.00 and costs of $5.50, to which judgment the defendant took this appeal.

What is a Canal?
"A 'canal' in the ordinary acceptance of the term, is an artificial channel or trench constructed for the purpose of conveying water, usually for the purpose of transportation or navigation. The term 'canal' is unlike the terms 'river,' 'pond,' 'lake,' and other words used to designate natural bodies of water, the ordinary meaning of which is confined to the water itself, in that it includes also the banks and has reference rather to the excavation or channel as a receptacle for the water. A canal has also been defined to be a navigable public highway of a peculiar kind."

"The canal in question, known as the Delaware River Canal, was originally created and constructed as an artificial channel for the purpose of transportation or navigation and was formerly owned and operated by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, principally for the transportation of coal and other products from the mining regions, along the Delaware River."

"It is no longer used as such and is presently owned and maintained by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. This canal may properly be regarded as an artificial arm or channel of the Delaware River because it receives substantially all of its water from said river at or near Easton and by means of various intakes from the river, at divers other places along its course, and discharges the same again into the Delaware River at or near Bristol."

tions promulgated thereunder are very broad and inclusive, they are, nevertheless, somewhat ambiguous in their application. In the absence of any other sources of water supply we would be strongly inclined to hold that this particular canal did not come within the classification of an inland stream as contemplated by the Act and regulations aforesaid. On the contrary, we would regard it as an arm of the Delaware River which, admittedly, is excluded from the provisions of this act. There was no evidence whatsoever of any water, other than that entering from the Delaware River, being in this canal.

"However, inasmuch as we are familiar with this canal for its entire distance, we cannot refrain from taking judicial notice of the fact that along its course a number of small brooks or streams empty therein at various points and, for that reason alone, we must construe it to be such an inland water as comes within the purview of the Act and regulations and, therefore, must declare the defendant to have been technically guilty of the offense with which she was charged."

"Notwithstanding this conclusion and decision, we hold no brief for the manner of enforcement pursued in this case. For several years there has been no water in the canal basin to the North of the defendants' property for a distance of approximately ten miles. South of the defendant's property, the canal has been partially filled with water, receiving the same by means of a feeder or intake from the Delaware River, the water of which enters the feeder at a point several hundred yards North of the 'River House' and flowing in a Southerly direction enters the canal basin immediately South of the 'River House'."

"Some of this intake water finds its way toward the North and forms a pool in front of the 'River House.' It was in this pool where the defendant was fishing at the time she was hailed by the Fish Warden and told to stop. Since the water forming this pool came from the Delaware River, making it possible to fish, it can readily be understood why the defendant was unaware she was violating any fishing law or regulations."

"This is supported by the fact that she asked the Fish Warden what she was doing that was wrong. The defendant is an eminently respectable person. She asked a civil question and was entitled to be extended ordinary courtesy by the public official in the form of a civil answer, which she did not receive."

"While ignorance of the law or regulations established by the Fish Commission may be no excuse, nevertheless, we feel it was incumbent upon the Warden, a public servant, in the exercise of ordinary courtesy to have informed the defendant of the offense with which she was alleged to have violated, instead of merely taking her name and number and then, abruptly, leave the premises and lodge an information before a justice of the peace residing about fifteen miles distant, notwithstanding there are a number of competent available justices in the immediate vicinity where the defendant resided."

"We are fully aware that in the absence of statutory regulations, a justice of the peace has criminal jurisdiction throughout the county. 'Nevertheless, it seems to us to indicate an abuse of process when a Warden institutes a prosecution before a distant justice or magistrate rather than before a justice in the vicinity in which the offense occurred, as was done in the instant case.'"

"It often creates an unnecessary inconvenience and hardship on the defendant and gives rise to suspicion as to the reason therefor. It is this kind of enforcement of which our citizens very properly disapprove."

"In this case a little courtesy on the part of the Warden might have avoided this prosecution, which we regard as having been unnecessary, under the peculiar controversial circumstances."

Sportsmanlike DRIVING

TAKE CARE OF TIRES

Take care of your tires! Motorists who fail to look after the "rubber shoes" of their cars head straight down a path to trouble, says the AAA driver training book, "Sportsmanlike Driving."

Under-inflation is the worst tire fault. Under-inflated tires wear out fast, make steering hard and braking uneven. Over-inflation also is a bad fault. Blow-outs are more likely. The middle of the tread gets extra wear. The tire loses road grip. Chances of skidding are greater.

Worn tires are trouble-brewers. Sharp objects in the road easily pierce them. Punctures or blowouts constantly threaten.

sales talk for General Eisenhower. It starts to backfire the moment someone else—in this case, Taft—emerges as being possibly even easier to elect than Eisenhower.

The fact is that one state after another has the bandwagon itch, and the instant it looks like a real boom has started, there is likely to be such a stampede as hasn't been seen in years.

The Eisenhower followers know this as well as anyone. They tried to start a stampede on the strength of New Hampshire and Minnesota. It wasn't enough. Now they are somewhat in the unhappy position of a prizefighter who puts his whole fight into a tremendous right-hand lead, and misses. They are off balance, out of position.

As of now, it is clear that General Eisenhower no longer has a chance for what is called a "cheap" victory. To win at all, he will have to work for it and fight for it. He can no longer sit on the sidelines and let others carry the fight.

Moreover, part of the gloss has been knocked off. The magic of his name, so impressive immediately after Minnesota, no longer creates a spell since Nebraska.

There was a time when General Eisenhower may have been convinced, upon the testimony of his friends, that he could win hands down if he entered the race personally. There was a time also when he and his supporters doubtless believed they were about to win by default, without the General ever having to return to this country.

Now the situation is that they know the General can't win without getting back here and taking up the cudgels personally; and they can't be sure he will win even then.

Naturally, there is little attractive about the idea of surrendering the headship of NATO and coming back here to campaign unsuccessfully against a man who may well become the next President.

The General's thoughts, in this dilemma, are going to be long, long thoughts, and much will hinge on what decision he reaches.

NUTRIENTS

HARRISBURG — (INS) — It's wise to count your pennies while buying food these days, but don't lose count of the nutrients in your food. This advice comes from the head nutritionist of the Pennsylvania State Health Department, Anna DePlantier Bowes. Mrs. Bowes says skimping on food leads to three big deficiencies—the lack of leafy and yellow vegetables, lack of the animal protein found mostly in meat, and the lack of vitamin C.
